Suicide methods

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia
Read View source View history

A suicide method is any means by which a person purposefully commits suicide, taking his or her own life. Suicide methods can be classified according to two modes of terminating one's life processes: physical or chemical. Physical modes of termination typically act by disrupting the respiratory system or the central nervous system usually by destruction of one or more key components.

Chemical methods of suicide produce latent evidence of action whereas physical methods produce direct evidence.
